

During my internship in non-profit management with the Hawaii Bicycling League, I was able to experience firsthand the behind-the-scenes operations of a small 501(c)(3). From grant-writing and research to facilitating committee meetings, I was entrusted with challenging and interesting responsibilities that encouraged professional growth. Working with a tight-knit and friendly staff fostered a comfortable and productive learning environment.

The Hawaii Bicycling League is dedicated to creating symbiotic internships tailored to the strengths and interests of each intern. As a result, I was able to benefit from my internship in a way unique to my expectations and future goals.

My summer with the Hawaii Bicycling League was invaluable and a rare find for a young intern. My colleagues respected and appreciated my work within the organization, and dedicated unprecedented resources to making this a positive learning experience.
